

High Federal Posts Fail To Tempt Moore

Ex-Governor, Friend Of Byrnes, Could Have Choice of Jobs

Former Governor A. Harry Moore could probably have the choice of several high-ranking Federal posts, if he were willing to go to Washington. He isn't, however, and every indication points to no interest in any job that might be offered. Reports of the ex-Governor joining the national administration in an active capacity have been current since James F. Byrnes was named Secretary of State. Byrnes and Moore are old friends, having grown to know and like each other while members of the United States Senate. Their friendship continued after Moore returned to New Jersey for his third term as Governor and Byrnes was a visitor at the Little White House at Sea Girt a number of occasions. Moore was in Washington recently and spent some time with Byrnes after calling upon the President. In some quarters the trip was seen as more than merely social. He insists it was not. Neither the former Governor nor Mrs. Moore liked Washington when he was there as a Senate member. Added to this fact is his announced retirement from office-seeking at the time he declined the strong persuasion of Mayor Hague of Jersey City to become a fourth-term candidate for Governor. If anything could bring him back to politics, it would be the governorship rather than a Washington berth, it was indicated.

SUFFERS HEAD WOUND IN DIVE INTO CREEK
When Bruce Goode, 13, of 508 North Hermitage Avenue, dove into the depths of Sanhican Creek near Lenape Avenue yesterday, he little suspected that it would put him in Mercer Hospital with a head wound. He struck some unknown object on the bottom and received a cut which required three stitches. His condition is good today.

Tornado's Howl Still Echoes

Calls for Cleanup Of Debris Continue To Harass City Officials; Tarpaulins from Dix Cover Unroofed Houses

It was a week ago this morning that Trenton awoke to find it had suffered a terrific pasting at the hands of the first tornado in the city's history.

Roofs were blown off, signs were ripped to pieces and hundreds of trees were uprooted or broken off.

It's been one big headache for Parks Director George W. Rieker. He has had several crews of men at work cutting up and carting away trees, but still the calls come in.

"What the . . . kind of a department are you running?" and "When in the . . . are you going to get that tree out of my way?" are typical of the more than 800 calls recorded in Rieker's City Hall office from impatient property owners.

Sixty-five trees were torn up or blown down in Cadwalader Park alone, according to Dennis Kuhn, in charge of the park personnel. The 20 men under Kuhn have worked daily, including Sunday and the Fourth of July, trying to get the park cleaned up.

Meanwhile, Edward Bloor, in charge of another big crew in Rieker's department, has been trying to keep up with the calls made to City Hall to get trees carted away throughout the city.

Rieker today appealed to the public to be patient, explaining his men are working to capacity to get the job done.

Public Works Director George W. Fage also has had crews of Street Department workers cleaning up the streets of the debris left behind by the tornado. His men, too, have been working to capacity in getting trees and broken limbs carted away.

Roofs were blown off at least a dozen dwellings in different sections of the city. Firemen placed all available tarpaulins they had atop the houses and then had to call on Fort Dix authorities for additional covers. Roofers say it will be nearly a month before they can recover any of the houses.

SOLDIER'S BEFORE-DEATH POEM GETS RECOGNITION

A poem written by the late Pfc. Alvan Tenney has been accepted for publication in the poetry anthology, "1945 Pages of Poetry," by Hillcrest Publishers of Los Angeles.

Private Tenney, the son of LeRoy Tenney of 48 Walnut Avenue, wrote the poem shortly before he was killed in action in Germany on March 15. He had been in the service 32 months and overseas a year, serving in Germany as an infantryman with Lieutenant General George Patton's Third Army. He was 20 years of age.

The poem, titled "Tonight for Freedom," will appear in the anthology this Fall.

Blood Donors Are Provided by Union

Ringoes Woman Reported Greatly Improved After Transfusions

When Sergeant Walter Robinson, stationed at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., learned that his mother, Mrs. Easie Robinson of Ringoes, was seriously ill at St. Francis Hospital and in need of blood transfusions of the rare A-O type, he was at first undecided on where he should appeal for help.

As a former employee of the Titeflex Hose Company of Newark, Sergeant Robinson knew of the blood donor service organized in his local union, UAW-CIO Local 280. An appeal followed.

While the union's blood service is set up for locals within a radius of Newark, the union found that there was no way for transporting the blood safely to Trenton. Hugh Caldwell, executive shop committeeman, contacted the New Jersey State Industrial Union Council and asked Miss Evelyn Dubrow, assistant to the president of the State CIO, to appeal to Trenton unions for help.

Miss Dubrow phoned Milton Bogdan, secretary-treasurer of UAW-CIO Local 731 in Trenton—a local union with a high record for giving blood to the Red Cross. Bogdan mobilized a group of donors to go to the hospital. From the group three were found to have blood of the right type—Bogdan, Anthony D'Amico, second vice president of Local 731, and James Liccardi, shop committeeman—all from the Luscombe unit.

Their contributions, together with blood given by Sergeant Walter Robinson and Miss Elaine Whitaker of the Newark local, carried Mrs. Robinson through while Bogdan continued to mobilize blood donors from the union here. Local 731's blood donors have given a total of nine pints and Mrs. Robinson's condition is reported greatly improved.

Mrs. Robinson has two other sons: Staff Sergeant John Robinson, radio mechanic in the Eighth Air Force, just home after three years of service, and Lieutenant (j.g.) Granville Robinson of the Merchant Marine, who has been three and a half years of service.

Joiner Receives Defense Award

Bannerman Presents Ribbon for Aid To Civilians

Malcolm Joiner, of Bear Tavern Corner, Washington Crossing, recently received an award for exceptional service in civilian defense.

N. Mitchell Bannerman, deputy director, State Office of Civilian Defense, presented the award to Joiner on the Titusville School grounds. The award is a ribbon similar to those worn by servicemen and is a federal award. Who receives these ribbons is determined by the State Office of Civilian Defense.

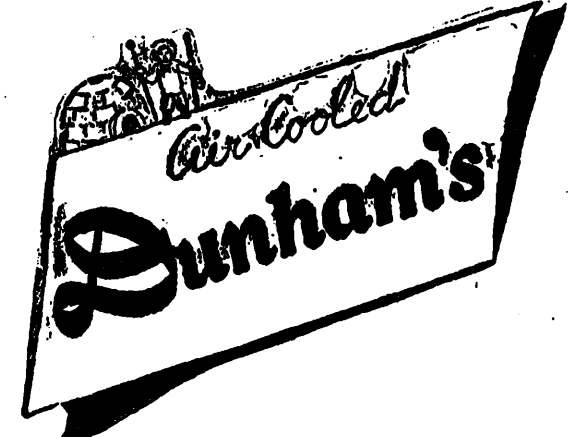

Mr. Joiner is chief of the auxiliary police of Hopewell Township Defense Council and helped organize and train the junior firemen unit of the Union Fire Company of Washington Crossing and Titusville, the rescue squad of Union Fire Company and is chairman of the salvage committee of Hopewell Township Defense Council.

When draft-age men of the Crossing and Titusville were taken into service, the need arose for younger boys to do rescue and fire department work. So Mr. Joiner started the junior firemen and the rescue squad. The rescue squad has since obtained a pulmotor, truck, metal boat, grappling irons and other life saving equipment. According to Mr. Bannerman the squad has performed many rescues and has eased the burden on the rescue squad of Bucks County, Pa., which formerly served in the Washington Crossing area.

Joiner is on the staff of the superintendent of the Washington Crossing State Park.
